1. 30-Second TL;DR

- Adani Total Gas raised CNG prices by Rs4/kg due to rising LNG costs, impacting supply dynamics.
- Apple's iPhone captured a 49% revenue share in Q2 2026, benefiting from stable pricing amid Android price hikes.
- The Consumer & Retail sector shows mixed sentiment, with trading multiples for Consumer Staples at 15.2x and E-commerce at 18.9x, driven by digital transformation and economic uncertainties.

2. 1-Minute TL;DR

- Adani Total Gas's price adjustment reflects rising sourcing costs for natural gas, aiming to maintain supply amidst geopolitical tensions.
- Apple's iPhone sales performance highlights its competitive advantage, capturing nearly half of the smartphone market revenue as Android competitors face price hikes.
- The Consumer & Retail sector is navigating mixed sentiment, with Consumer Staples trading at an EV/EBITDA of 15.2x and E-commerce at 18.9x. Key drivers include digital transformation and supply chain optimization, while economic uncertainty and inflation pose challenges.
- Investors should focus on companies enhancing operational efficiency and adapting to evolving consumer preferences.

3. 2-Minute TL;DR

- Adani Total Gas's recent price adjustment of Rs4/kg for CNG is a strategic response to rising LNG costs, driven by reduced domestic availability and geopolitical factors. This move aims to sustain supply but poses risks of regulatory scrutiny and competition from state-run entities.
- Apple Inc. reported a strong Q2 2026, with iPhone sales leading the smartphone market at a 49% revenue share. This success is attributed to stable pricing strategies amidst rising costs in the Android segment, although future price increases could impact demand.
